Leaked Manitoba Hydro audit raises concerns about spending $251M in spending.

Taxpayers group says audit shows need for release of documents for the sake of transparency

BERNICE PONTANILLA
bernice.pontanilla@metronews.ca

Leaked Manitoba Hydro audit documents show questionable spending and the need for more transparency, the Canadian Taxpayers Federation (CTF) said on Thursday.

Colin Craig, the CTF's prairie director, held a press conference near the Hydro building at Portage Avenue and St. James Street to show off the latest documents his group has received.

The audit, which was done in response to concerns raised by Hydro staff over consultation bills racked up by York Factory First Nation, looked at $5 million spent over two years (2011 and 2012).

It found nearly half a million dollars in "non-compliant items," including $78,500 to $108,000 in overpayment of airfares.

"To date over the last 14 years, Manitoba Hydro has spent $251 million — a quarter of a billion dollars — on these dam negotiation costs and process costs, and they've continued to insist that it's all confidential and they refuse to release any of the documents to the public," said Craig, who also thanked the Hydro staff and aboriginal whistleblowers.

The audit made 45 recommendations, such as reviewing accounting systems, implementing more effective planning and control over travel expenses as well as reviewing practices to ensure compliance with reimbursement policy.

Craig said based on the leaked documents and freedom of information requests, he believes more audits have happened.

"We want to see any and all audit documents related to this quarter of a billion dollars that's been spent, we want to see all of the receipts. We think that the (provincial) government should require Hydro to start releasing this information," Craig added.

"And if that requires passing a law, or something like that, then do it. I mean for goodness sakes, they passed a retroactive law to increase our taxes, certainly they can do the same in the name of transparency."

York Factory First Nation is involved in the proposed Conawapa and Keeyask hydroelectric projects.

Goose-related collisions down around Kenaston

Manitoba Public Insurance says they've seen a nearly 50 per cent drop in goose-related accidents in the Kenaston area over the last two years as a group continues their crusade to rid area roads of geese by raiding nests and destroying the Canadian icon's eggs.

MPI spokesperson Brian Smiley said Thursday the public insurer had about 35 claims from drivers who hit geese on roads mostly in the Kenaston area last year, down from the 66 they saw in 2012.

"From our perspective, we know that geese wandering on roads can cause a hazard for motorists," said Smiley, who couldn't say whether the group's efforts over the last four years has led to the decreases. "I do know, though, that we've seen a decrease in geese-vehicle collisions. Is it a coincidence? I'm not sure."

The Urban Goose Working Group has been busy destroying goose eggs along Kenaston Boulevard again this year and have already removed over 1,500 eggs from nests.

Once removed, the eggs are frozen before being taken to the dump.

Group spokesperson Jim Leafloor acknowledged some people might find the practice cruel but said human safety is the their top priority.

He said the geese pose a risk to drivers on the busy roadway, a fact echoed by Smiley.

"Typically what we'll see is the goose walking along the road on the shoulder, something startles it, and it will then fly into the vehicle," he explained, noting most claims are for things like broken headlights and damaged bumpers.

"The damages are typically not that high, but there's certainly a financial cost to striking a bird."

We Create Change. National tour hits the 'Peg

The hard humanitarian work of hundreds of Winnipeg students was cause for celebration as the We Create Change cross-Canada tour stopped in Winnipeg on Thursday.

A gym full of junior high and high school students at Sisler were treated to musical performances by the band Neverest and uplifting messages from We Day speakers Hannah Alper, a 10-year-old eco-blogger, and Spencer West, who despite losing his legs at age five successfully reached the summit of Mount Kilimanjaro in 2011.

West encouraged students to continue making a difference and keeping up with struggles that children are going through in other parts of the globe.

West thanked the students who've been fundraising for the Free The Children's Year of Education project, which aims to build 200 schools and schoolrooms for children overseas.

The We Create Change tour, a road trip across Canada, ends in Toronto on June 17.

Sure sign the silly season has started: Official thing naming

Focusing on what matters most. You can stop fretting: we now have an official fish, grass and mammal

At least they didn't name the mosquito Manitoba's official insect.

In a blitz of official thing naming Thursday, the province named the walleye Manitoba's official provincial fish after Manitobans voted it their top pick.

And the fact the walleye — better known as pickerel to most in the province — is also the official fish of our neighbours in Saskatchewan and Minnesota, doesn't bother Manitoba's Minister of Conservation and Water Stewardship, Gord Mackintosh.

"It didn't matter in the end what Saskatchewan or Minnesota may have thought about their own jurisdictions — what's important here is what Manitobans think," he said. "I think those that fish in Manitoba tend to be a shore lunch bunch and that's how it all came out."

Along with an official fish, the province also named the plains bison our official mammal and made big blue stem grass Manitoba's official grass.

Because, really, what would we be without an official grass?

"Grass is tremendously important," said Tourism, Culture, Heritage, Sport and Consumer Protection Minister Ron Lemieux, who joined Mackintosh to announce the new official symbols. "Species use grass for cover, for food, forage and so on. It really truly is important to the overall ecosystem that we have in Manitoba and throughout the Prairies."

"We have many official emblems in the province and today we're going to add three more, which we are extremely proud of." SHANE GIBSON/METRO

Manitoba's Minister of Conservation and Water Stewardship revealed the walleye is now Manitoba's official fish at a press conference Thursday. METRO

The Forks believes its latest offering will have staying power.

Representatives with the Manitoba government, CAA, Assiniboine Park and The Forks were all smiles as they launched the province's first public-access electric vehicle charging station on Thursday morning.

"(We) want to make it as easy as we can for people to transition into electric vehicles," said Municipal Government Minister Stan Struthers, adding the province and other partners paid $5,000 for the unit's installation and The Forks will be providing the power.

"We are just getting started with this, so we will see more and more come online as more and more people become interested in this technology."

Clare MacKay, vice-president of marketing and communications for The Forks, picked up on Struthers' opening remarks in her speech.

"You mentioned that this is a place to recharge your batteries and it connected with me with The Forks is a place to recharge your batteries, so it really is a perfect fit," said MacKay.

No arrests after serious assault on Osborne Street

Winnipeg police taped off a section of Osborne Street Thursday morning after an assault overnight.

Police said emergency personnel were called to the 100 block of Osborne Street at about 3:45 a.m. on Thursday. There, they found an adult man bleeding and broken due to a serious assault. He was taken to hospital in critical condition, where he remained Thursday night.

Police blocked off one lane of Osborne Street northbound while they investigated Thursday morning. No arrests have been made, and police had no new information by press deadline.

Anyone with any information is being asked to call police at 204-986-2877. METRO

Canada to support seal hunt despite embargo

WTO. Challenging the EU ban on seal products proves to be unsuccessful

Canada lost its bid to overturn Europe's ban on imported seal products Thursday but seized on World Trade Organization (WTO) findings that aspects of the embargo breach international obligations.

A WTO appeal decision released in Geneva upheld a previous ruling that the European Union ban is "necessary to protect public morals" regarding animal welfare.

It also says the embargo "constitutes a means of arbitrary or unjustifiable discrimination," particularly because of how exemptions for seal products from Inuit or indigenous communities are handled. At issue was a challenge by Canada and Norway of the 28-member EU's 2010 ban on the import and sale of seal fur, meat and other products.

It's the end of the line for appeals at the WTO, but Fisheries Minister Gail Shea said Ottawa will still support the industry through product research and other measures. THE CANADIAN PRESS

U of S. School's president fired amid budget controversy

University of Saskatchewan students who called for the school's president to resign say they're relieved that she has been fired.

Ilene Busch-Vishniac, who sparked controversy with planned budget cuts and with the firing of a tenured professor who spoke out about them, was herself let go Wednesday night.

Nick Marlatte, who organized a rally earlier this week, said it's a good step toward restoring the Saskatoon-based school's reputation.

"I think it indicates that there's some hope that the quality of the university is going to be preserved and that the board of governors actually understands that people are not only upset but actually scared about the future of this institution," Marlatte said in a phone interview Thursday.

Marlatte said students are pleased to see the university's board of governors change direction, but he's still apprehensive about how things will move forward.

"There's been a lot of talk that things are going to change," he said. "But I can't say that there's much trust ... and I'm not going to really assume any trust until there is very definite sort of proof that that's the case."

Prof. Robert Buckingham, who was also executive director of the School of Public Health, was fired last week after writing a letter to the government and Opposition about the cuts.

Busch-Vishniac admitted a few days later that the university "made a blunder" in its handling of Buckingham. He was offered back — and accepted — his tenure position, but Busch-Vishniac said he would not be reinstated as head of the School of Public Health.

The board made a "very difficult decision, but very necessary decision" in firing Busch-Vishniac, Advanced Education Minister Rob Norris said Thursday. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Budget cuts

The university released a plan last month that includes cutting jobs, reorganizing the administration and dissolving some programs to try to save about $25 million.

- The cuts are part of a bigger goal to address a projected $44.5-million deficit in the school's operating budget by 2016.

Syrian gov't troops break year-long rebel prison siege

Political victory.

Military success in rebellious north with presidential elections two weeks away

Syrian tanks backed by massive air power rolled into the grounds of a sprawling prison in Aleppo on Thursday, breaking a yearlong rebel siege and allowing President Bashar Assad's forces to close in on a nearby rebel command centre.

State TV showed troops celebrating inside the prison complex, showcasing a rare government triumph in the mostly rebel-held north less than two weeks before President Bashar Assad's expected re-election.

The Syrian army has made gains around the capital, Damascus, seat of Assad's power, and in the centre of the country. It has now turned its attention to the north and rebel-held parts of the south, where it seeks to advance ahead of the June 3 vote dismissed by Western powers as a sham.

Aleppo, once Syria's prized commercial centre, has been carved into rebel- and government-controlled areas since opposition fighters launched an offensive in mid-2012.

Aleppo Central Prison, which lies on a highway about six kilometres (four miles) north of the city, has been caught in the middle of the country's civil war, its 4,000 inmates, including women, trapped in a hell of daily battles, fear and disease. The situation inside the facility was at one point so dire that the army was obliged to airdrop food to besieged government troops who were trying to fend off rebels trying to free the inmates.

Government forces stormed the prison at dawn Wednesday after rebels fled under intense aerial bombardment, according to Aleppo-based activists and the Britain-based Syrian Observatory for Human Rights.

This is the fourth time Russia and China have used their veto power as permanent council members to de-

Chemical weapons

Ingredients disposal lags

The global chemical weapons watchdog says the last 100 tons of Syria's declared stockpile of precursors for poison gas and nerve agents have been packed and are ready for transport but Damascus says it's too risky to move them.

Syria is already well behind schedule in removing its stockpile of some 1,300 metric tons of chemicals that it declared to the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons last year.

All the chemicals were supposed to have been destroyed by the end of June, but that deadline now appears out of reach.

Nigerian president gives protesters cold shoulder

'Bring back our girls!'
President sends proxy out to talk to crowd, statement urges them to stop criticizing

Scores of protesters chanting "Bring Back Our Girls" marched Thursday to Nigeria's presidential villa to demand more action to free nearly 300 schoolgirls abducted by Islamic militants, but President Goodluck Jonathan did not meet with them, leaving a proxy to deliver a lecture that further angered the demonstrators.

"Another small window for Jonathan and he refuses to use it!" one protester yelled. "What a stupid move!"

The protesters complained that Jonathan did not even meet some of the parents of abducted children who came to see him earlier this month.

Many schools across the country also closed Thursday to protest recent abductions and the killings of scores of teachers by Islamic extremists.

In Maiduguri, the northeast city that is the birthplace of Boko Haram, protesting teachers said they "can no longer tolerate government insensitivity to the plight of the girls and the education sector."

In Abuja the marchers sang, "All we are saying is bring back our girls," to the tune of John Lennon's iconic Give Peace a Chance. Cabinet ministers and aides told the Civil society groups were counselled to "encourage Nigerians to supply useful information to the security services." That inflamed the crowd since that is exactly what residents of Chibok did, and if the military had responded, the girls might never have been kidnapped.

U.S. joins hunt for schoolgirls

Eighty U.S. Air Force personnel have begun their mission in Chad to help locate nearly 300 schoolgirls kidnapped in neighbouring Nigeria, a U.S. military spokesman said Thursday.

The girls and young women were kidnapped on April 15 from a school in the northeast Nigerian town of Chibok by an Islamic extremist group known as Boko Haram. The group's leader has threatened to sell most of the estimated 276 schoolgirls still being held into slavery unless the Nigerian government releases detained militants.

U.S. President Barack Obama told Congress in a letter Wednesday about the deployment.

Obama said the service members will help with intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance aircraft for missions over northern Nigeria and the nearby region.

At least 130 dead. Search goes on for bomb victims

Family and friends of the wounded and missing continued to search for victims Thursday in the wake of two bomb blasts that rocked a bustling marketplace in the Nigerian city of Jos.

Residents say government action could have helped avert at least one of the two bombings Tuesday. The death toll has risen to at least 130, making them the deadliest bombings yet committed by Boko Haram extremists.

Market vendors said their suspicions were aroused by a white van that had been parked for hours under a pedestrian bridge, according to Mark Lipdo of the Christian charity Stefanos Foundation. He said they warned soldiers near a checkpoint, but nothing was done.

Many of the dead may never be identified, University of Jos student leader Dickson Odeh said after his group searched several hospital mortuaries.

4,300-year-old dino found? Creation museum exhibits dinosaur skeleton

A new exhibit of a nine-metre-long fossil skeleton of an Allosaurus, which resembles a Tyrannosaurus rex, is set to open at a Kentucky museum that asserts dinosaurs lived alongside humans a few thousand years ago.

A release from Answers in Genesis, the Christian ministry that owns the Creation Museum, said about 50 per cent of the skeleton's bones were recovered when it was found in Colorado over a decade ago.

Keeping with its Bible-themed approach, the Creation Museum says the dinosaur died in a worldwide flood about 4,300 years ago. Most scientists say the last dinosaurs roamed the earth more than 60 million years ago.

Girl's alleged abductor charged

Kidnapping case.

Woman says mother's former boyfriend raped her over 10-year period

Prosecutors charged a man Thursday with kidnapping his former girlfriend's 15-year-old daughter a decade ago and repeatedly sexually assaulting her.

Isidro Medrano Garcia faces five felony counts, including rape and kidnapping to commit a sexual offence, the Orange County district attorney's office said. His arraignment was expected later in the day.

The woman, now 25, came forward this week and told police that Garcia had abducted her and then through physical, mental and sexual abuse kept her from reuniting with her family since her 2004 disappearance.

Garcia forced the woman to marry in 2007 and fathered a daughter with her in 2012, according to investigators with the Santa Ana Police Department.

Garcia's lawyer says the woman's claims of physical and sexual abuse are lies invented because the couple is breaking up.

Bombings. Attackers kill 31 in China

Attackers hurled bombs from two SUVs that plowed through shoppers at a busy street market in China's volatile northwestern region of Xinjiang on Thursday, killing 31 people and wounding more than 90.

The early morning attack in the city of Urumqi was the bloodiest in a series of violent incidents over recent months that Chinese authorities have blamed on radical separatists from the country's Muslim Uighur minority.

Uighur activists contend that restrictive and discriminatory policies favouring the Chinese migrants are fuelling the bloodshed.

The two vehicles crashed through barriers at 7:50 a.m. and drove right into the crowds while setting off explosives, according to a statement by the Xinjiang regional government. It was unclear how many assailants were in the cars. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thai government overthrown as military stages bloodless coup

Constitution scrapped.

Nationwide curfew ordered; 18 government officials ordered to report to new governing military commission

Thailand's military seized power Thursday in a bloodless coup, dissolving the government, scrapping the constitution and dispersing groups of protesters from both sides of the country's political divide who had gathered in Bangkok and raised fears of a violent showdown.

The powerful army chief, Gen. Prayuth Chan-ocha, announced the military takeover in a statement broadcast on national television. It was followed by additional announcements including a nationwide curfew from 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. and an order for 18 government officials — including the ousted prime minister — to report immediately to the country's new governing military commission.

Soldiers kept a low profile in the centre of the capital. But as the curfew approached, troops diverted traffic at key intersections and used armoured personnel carriers to block some main roads, including the one in front of the U.S. Embassy. Soldiers dispersed most demonstrators from two protest sites where competing groups were camped out — one backing the now-ousted elected government and another that had struggled for seven months to unseat it.

Although the military insisted it wasn't taking sides, its ousting of the government met the key goal of the anti-government protesters. The pro-government "Red Shirt" supporters had earlier said they would not tolerate a coup, but there were no immediate signs of resistance or reports of violence. The military provided hundreds of buses to take the protesters home.

An army spokesman later announced that it had dissolved the caretaker government and cancelled the constitution, but the Senate would remain in place. He said Prayuth would assume the duties of the prime minister until a new one was in place.

The army also ordered the suspension of all television broadcasting and replaced programming with patriotic music to fill air time between announcements.

The coup was the 12th since Thailand's absolute monarchy ended in 1932.

Army action denounced by Canada

Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird has condemned the military takeover in Thailand and is urging a rapid return to civilian rule.

"Canada condemns the decision today by the Royal Thai Army to seize control from Thailand's elected government, to suspend the Thai constitution and to restrict civil liberties," he said in a statement.

The Thai ambassador in Ottawa was called in to hear Canada's concerns directly.

Baird says Canada wants action.

With the country playing host to World Pride celebrations in Toronto this summer, Metro Canada is showing its support for the LGBTQ community with its first Canadian guest editorship. Multiple Juno winners Tegan and Sara are using their guest editorship to acknowledge some of the young people across Canada who are working to make a difference in the LGBTQ community

For Metro

Year after year, album after album, our music has offered our fans a soundtrack for their experiences in life and love. The process of sharing our music with our fans and having them share their experiences with us is a cathartic cycle. As we have become more successful, that cathartic cycle has become about much more than love and loss in the romantic realm. Fans aren't just sharing stories about heartbreak related to romance, they are sharing stories about heartbreak related to being LGBTQ. Awful tales of being kicked out of their houses for being gay; sad stories about their parents forbidding them to see their same-sex partners; gut-wrenching accounts about being bullied at school because they are queer.

As sad as these stories have been, increasingly they've started to have a current of hopefulness pulsing through them. One after another, our LGBTQ fans have told us our music is helping them through. Parents have started coming to our shows with their LGBTQ teenagers to thank us for being role models. They have questions and worries just like our Mom did when we came out: Will the world accept my child? Can my child still be successful and gay? The answer is yes. Emphatically, yes. We hope our success brings peace to these parents and reassurance to the young LGBTQ people we talk to each day. Most of all we hope to continue to be a beacon of change to the mainstream.

Online only

Tegan and Sara share a few words about other LGBTQ Canadian musicians online at metronews.ca

When we started our career 16 years ago, we did not have the foresight to know how significant being out would be to our career and lives. However, we always had an instinct that being open and honest about our sexuality — with media and fans alike — was the only way to live in our public life. It felt counterintuitive to hide who we were when our music was so sincere and transparent. Sara and I were aware that our career and audience would be better served by brutal honesty and openness rather than omissions about our experiences as gay people. How could we possibly sell our music if we weren't open about the content of the music?

Looking back, I'm proud that we had the fortitude to withstand some of the sexism and homophobia we faced. Though, truthfully, when I reflect on those early days, I don't often see us struggling or hurting over these obstacles. I just see two really strong kids, irritatingly confident, forging ahead in face of anything that was thrown our way — just like I see so many of our young fans in the LGBTQ community doing themselves today.

Tegan and Sara, always open about their sexuality, "hope to continue to be a beacon of change to the mainstream." LINDSEY BYRNES

With this issue of Metro, we aim to introduce you to a legion of queer heroes we admire. Young people who

Reveling in a riotous rainbow of messages

A picture's worth a thousand words.

Emy Storey's Revel & Riot T-shirts speak for themselves

For Metro

It was only natural that Emy Storey would eventually turn her hand to a project beyond designing band T-shirts and album cover art.

"I had wanted for a long time to fuse the personal and political and pursue a project that was involved with gay rights," says the Montreal-based graphic designer about the impulse that led her to start Revel & Riot.

"In terms of graphics representing the movement, there really hadn't been a lot. You'd go into a gay bookstore and you'd try to buy a T-shirt and it always looked the same," she says, referring to the rainbow and pink triangle designs — images that haven't changed much since the 1970s.

So Storey applied her graphic design talents to the problem, creating new takes on the classic imagery and printing them on T-shirts.

"Especially with something like personal identity, expressing your support for LGBTQ people or trying to express that fact about yourself, a T-shirt seems like a really great medium, because you wear it on your chest," she says. "You really can't get any more personal than that."

The images are intriguing, thought-provoking, and resonate deeply with the cause.

Take, for example, Storey's rainbow mountain design. "I wanted to pay respect to the rainbow — it's beautiful, it's something that brings gay people a lot of comfort and pride and recognizability, but I wanted to do something new with it," she says.

Thinking of the ongoing struggle of the LGBTQ community's fight for equality, she says, "I had this idea of a mountain, and how in fact despite all the progress (we've made), there's so much more mountain to climb." It's one of Revel & Riot's most popular T-shirts.

Other designs, including Life Goes By Too Quickly, a re-imagining of the LGBTQ acronym, and We Are the Gay Kids, a representation of the diversity of the LGBTQ community, are available on the website; products include buttons, tote bags and paintings, with prices ranging from $5 to $500.

Proceeds from sales fund the organization's work promoting LGBTQ rights, awareness and equality. Revel & Riot also provides a wide range of LGBTQ resources online, including a database of community organizations, articles and videos. But it always comes back to the art.

"It's interesting what graphics can do," Storey says.

"It's profoundly important to have writing and resources and material available to support the message ...

"But good graphics can bring people to the cause in the first place. It catches someone's eye, they share the image — it's a very effective way to get a message across quickly."

Emy Storey became the official Tegan and Sara art director in 2003. Emy designs album concepts, album artwork, websites, marketing materials, stage backdrops and — perhaps most importantly — she is the integral force behind our band merchandising. Emy has helped create a vast collection of designs that allowed us to launch each new campaign with pride. She turned an important part of our business into a fundamental part of our band's culture. In recent years, Emy founded Revel & Riot — a company to support LGBTQ rights through art, resources and T-shirts — and she continues to inspire us with her unique design and passionate politics. Tegan and Sara has become a band that's known almost as much for its esthetic as for its music, and this we owe almost solely to Emy Storey. Our favourite design — and it's hard to say after 11 years of working together! — was our most recent collaboration with Revel & Riot for last summer's tour with Fun. The Animals T-shirt captured the spirit of Revel & Riot and Tegan and Sara perfectly, and it flew off the shelves. SARA QUIN

The filmmaker's progress

What I Love About Being Queer. From short film to Tumblr account to book: The evolution of Vivek Shraya's multimedia project

AUSTEN GILLILAND
For Metro

"I try to focus on the ways the world has gotten better for queer people, especially in my lifetime," says Vivek Shraya, "but hearing people who are 10 years younger than I am going through the same thought processes I was going through when I was coming out — 'My parents won't accept me. I think I'm disgusting. Is this a phase? Will it go away?' — that self-hate, I find really disturbing."

Shraya is a human rights adviser by day, a musician, filmmaker and author by night. It was his interactions with the LGBTQ students he met through his work for Diversity, Equity and Human Rights Services at Toronto's George Brown College that inspired one of his biggest projects to date: What I Love About Being Queer.

"I wanted to create a project that showcased the positive aspects of being queer," he says. "To say to these students, 'Hey, you know, this complicated part of yourself that you don't know how to reconcile right now is also something that makes you beautiful. It's something that should be celebrated.'"

To answer their questions, he asked one of his own. "I thought, Why not ask people what they love about being queer?" Shraya says. It was a question he wasn't sure he could answer himself. "I think a lot of us have grown up in a world where we learned the opposite first; where we learned all the negative things about being queer." Growing up as a gay South Asian in Edmonton in the '90s, he was well acquainted with the negatives — homophobia and a sense of isolation, just to start — but this was a chance to refocus.

He set up his film equipment in his living room and asked friends to contribute, then reached out to "people who had inspired me: Educators, activists, artists. I wanted a lot of people of colour;

Vivek Shraya's project funds an LGBTQ student leadership award. CONTRIBUTED that was important to me." In the end, the film featured 34 people — but Shraya didn't want to stop there.

"I was increasingly aware that there was no way for me to actually fully capture the amazing diversity of the queer community," he says. That's where Tumblr came in. "That made it an open project. Anyone, anywhere, could submit their answer." Within six months, he had more than 200 submissions from around the world.

The idea for the book came from his friend Farzana Doctor, a Lambda-winning author and project contributor, who suggested that publishing a coffee-table book would be a great way of extending the reach of the project.

At first, Shraya wasn't convinced. "It's really powerful to see so many different queer bodies expressing what they love about being queer on film," he says. He worried that immediacy and intimacy would be lost on paper.

But then he thought about what the book would have meant to him as a young man. "If someone had handed me a book like that when I was 16, when I was struggling with who I was ... I couldn't have imagined something like this, then," he says.

Shraya approached his manager at George Brown, Dale Hall, with a proposal: If the department could help fund the project, he would donate the proceeds to a leadership award for LGBTQ students. "I gave a 10-minute presentation," he says, "and I said, 'Do you have any questions?' She said, 'Nope,' and that was it. She's been a real champion of this project."

With Hall's support, the book came together quickly. It features selections from the film and Tumblr, plus contributions made by audience members at screenings. Familiar faces, including Sook-Yin Lee and Tegan Quinn, are surrounded by photos and quotes from queer people from all ages, and the book was recently nominated for a Lambda Literary Award.

and the book was recently nominated for a Lambda Literary Award. In a world where so many cultural representations of the gay community have a tragic aspect, Shraya is happy to focus on the positive.

"Those [tragic] stories are important to showcase, but I also think it's important to show that we have rich lives," he says. "We build community, we make great art, we're hilarious. There are all these other facets about us that sometimes get lost."

Queer body of work

What I LOVE about being QUEER

Find What I Love About Being Queer at George Brown College bookstores, Glad Day Bookshop (gladdaybookshop.com), or Vivek Shraya's website (vivekshraya.com).

Along with his What I Love About Being Queer project, Vivek Shraya also wrote God Loves Hair, a collection of 21 short stories about a child navigating the complex realms of sexuality, gender, racial politics, religion, and belonging. Visit metronews.ca for excerpts and a video of Shraya reading from the collection.

When I met Vivek over 10 years ago, I was struck by how positive he was. Especially considering that we "met" via Vivek throwing a CD at me on stage, and narrowly missing my head! Backstage I was blown away by his candour. He has the most infectious laugh I've ever encountered in my life. Until recently I just thought of him as a dear friend and a very talented musician. But Vivek surprised me — and probably a lot of other people — by creating a massive body of work in the last few years that has left songs, books, and movies in its wake. One of his most inspiring pieces is a book called What I Love About Being Queer. A collection of queer people describing what they love about being queer (duh?!). In my humble opinion, it's a coffee-table book that should be mandatory in every Canadian's household. I was thrilled to be part of it, and when my copy showed up at my house it moved me to tears. A truly lovely artist making a BIG difference in the world today. TEGAN QUINN

Jer's Vision gives youth safer space

Founded nine years ago, Jer's Vision has been engaging and empowering youth across Canada in addressing homophobia, transphobia and bullying.

The youth-run organization offers workshops, mentors schools and youth communities to improve and create safer space, and holds LGBTQ & Ally youth conferences across the country to support youth in running diversity clubs.

Jer's Vision is also behind the International Day of Pink (held the second Wednesday in April), when more than 9.5 million Canadians wear pink to stop bullying, homophobia and transphobia.

Jeremy Dias, who, after coming out in high school in Sault St. Marie, was severely bullied, created the organization. When he was 17, he filed a legal case against the school and school board and at 21 he won Canada's second largest human rights settlement. He used that money to found Jer's Vision: Canada's Youth Diversity Initiative, the international Day of Pink and the Jeremy Dias Scholarship.

A glimpse of the Winnipeg Duchess Disney calendar

Somewhere over the Rainbow. Drag queen recreates fairy-tale princesses in support of LGBTQ children

DANELLE CLOUTIER
For Metro

Once upon a time in Winnipeg, a young man transformed into drag queen Satina Loren to explore a life-long love of Disney. It sounds like a fairy tale, but it's not.

Wearing dazzling frocks and vibrant makeup, Satina (Kerry Dale), is the star of Tina Jansen's photographs of Disney princesses brought to life — all done to support and educate LGBTQ children.

Satina is fundraising for the Rainbow Resource Centre, a non-profit organization in Winnipeg offering outreach and educational services, and for Youth Educating Against Homophobia (YEAH), a program that celebrates diversity and raises awareness about the impact homophobia can have on young people.

"My main goal is to showcase Tina's brilliant work as a photographer, while showing everyone what I love — which is the magic and imagination that fairy tales create," said Satina. "(And give) the funds to charities I completely endorse and believe in 100 per cent."

Satina is the Duchess for the Imperial Sovereign Court of Winnipeg and All of Manitoba (ISCWAM), an organization that aims to raise funds for local charities. It is one of the chapters of the International Imperial Court System, the second largest LGBTQ organization in the world.

While signed images sell for $5 each, a September 2013 to December 2014 calendar is also available for $20. They are available at the Rainbow Resource Centre.

Recently I was out buying children's books for a friend with a five-year-old. I was disheartened to find that even in Canada, in 2014, there are very few books with LGBTQ themes on the shelves at major book retailers (in fact I found zero at this particular Chapters). Online I was able to find wonderfully inclusive books about LGBTQ families, children, superheroes, and animals. But sadly, most people won't be searching online at exclusive book dealers for these important books. That's why what Satina (Kerry Dale) is doing is so touching to me. And important. Children are intrinsically open-minded. They accept what we teach them. If we encourage acceptance, love, and understanding, we will raise a generation without so much hate and ignorance. TEGAN QUIN

PFLAG for trans awareness

Not All Prisons Have Bars print campaign. CONTRIBUTED

A new campaign from PFLAG Canada (Parents, Families and Friends of Lesbians and Gays) is raising awareness that transgender people are not simply deciding to change gender, but trying to make how they feel inside match how they look outside. Launched in April, the print campaign features a man and a woman wearing masks of the opposite gender with the line: Not All Prisons Have Bars. Support Trans Awareness. A video campaign has also been launched.

As part of its previous

A lot to be proud of

As Winnipeg's gay pride celebration approaches, there's a lot the LGBT community in Manitoba has to be proud of over the past year, although there were a few setbacks. Some notable events:

- Steinbach student Evan Wiens made international news when he decided to start a gay-straight alliance group in his religious, conservative town. The idea sparked a furor and an international media frenzy, but Wiens stuck to his guns. The group and posters allowing its advertisement were approved by the local school board in April 2013.

- The gay owners of 'n' Hands restaurant in Morris told media they had to shut down after they felt they were being "run out of town" by local residents. Premier Greg Selinger condemned the actions of a few town members and local councillors tried to convince them to stay. Other local residents and supporters drove into Morris one day to rally around the restaurant, but the owners still closed down at the end of April.

- An anti-bullying law called Bill 18 drew ire from the PC party of Manitoba and religious private schools, but the Manitoba government passed the bill in September anyway, requiring schools to allow students to set up gay-straight alliances if students want to do so.

- Several local bars in Winnipeg declare they will no longer sell Russian vodka to protest the treatment and persecution of the LGBTQ community in Russia.

- A pride flag is flown on the grounds of the Manitoba Legislature during the Olympics in support of gay athletes.

- The town of Thompson announces it will be holding its own gay pride celebration and parade, thanks to a partnership with Winnipeg Pride.

A Pro-Russian fighter waits for his comrades as a private house burns after it was set on fire by a mortar shell on the outskirts of the town of Lysychansk, Ukraine, Thursday. EVGENIY MALOLETKA / THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the deadliest raid yet on Ukrainian troops, pro-Russia insurgents attacked a military checkpoint Thursday, killing 16 soldiers, and the interim prime minister accused Moscow of trying to disrupt the upcoming election for a new president to lead the divided country out of its crisis.

A rebel commander said one of his fighters also died in the raid in eastern Ukraine, which left a gruesome scene of charred military vehicles and scorched bodies near the town of Volnovakha, 30 kilometres south of the city of Donetsk.

The armed uprising and the government's offensive to put it down have cast a shadow over Sunday's election, with Kyiv acknowledging it will be impossible to hold the vote in some areas. In the eastern regions of Donetsk and Luhansk, where separatists have declared independence and pledged to derail the vote, election workers reported threats and interference from gunmen.

In the attack on the checkpoint, residents said the rebels arrived in an armoured bank truck, which the unsuspecting Ukrainian soldiers waved through. The rebels opened fire with automatic weapons and rocket-propelled grenades, acting President Oleksandr Turchynov said.

500 Canadians get set to observe Ukraine election

Ensuring fairness.

Proud to help uphold democracy, Canadians travelling overseas will be keeping their eyes wide open

DYLAN C. ROBERTSON
winnipeg@metronews.ca

Olga Radchenko is heading back to her birth country — but not to visit relatives.

"The current situation has become so incredibly polarized," says the 28-year-old, who moved to Toronto with her Ukrainian family at the age of 10. "I want to play a positive role. I hope this can help resolve the crisis."

Radchenko left on Victoria Day as one of 500 Canadians observing Ukraine's election. For a third time in a decade, a large delegation of Canadians are taking weeks off work to head to Ukraine. They'll be attending campaign rallies, inspecting polling stations and watching ballot counts.

"I feel nothing short of honoured," says Radchenko, echoing two other election observers who spoke to Metro. "I think it's a great role for Canada to play."

Governments who struggle with corruption often invite election observers from other countries to deter voter fraud, bolstering an election's credibility. Ukraine's Sunday election is being monitored by the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE), a group supported by 57 governments including Canada, the U.S. and Russia.

Radchenko has a good understanding of her 10-day duty as a short-term observer.

"The general job description is to be an unbiased observer of the electoral process leading up to the election; and the days of the vote counting, to watch carefully and to record what's happening."

The OSCE gives observers intensive training upon arrival in the country of the vote. Observers normally wear a lanyard, which election officers are trained to recognize. Observers are instructed to watch for anything that leads to an unfair vote.

Some examples given by

Past votes

Canada regularly sends a handful of experienced observers to elections being held under difficult circumstances. For example, two long-term observers joined an OSCE-led mission tracking Mongolia's presidential elections last June. Others include:

- Ukraine's 2012 parliamentary election — 490 observers
- Haiti's 2011 presidential election — 30 observers
- 2006 Palestinian parliamentary election — 58 observers

History

Modern election monitoring started with an 1857 vote in Romania, but the concept gained popularity after the end of the Cold War, as countries like Ukraine embraced democracy.

- While monitors produce a report, having watchers deters vote rigging.

monitoring groups include: making sure ballot boxes are empty before voting starts, verifying poll booths are secure, watching for intimidation, listening for campaigning from election officers, detailing how many ballots were disqualified and why, and making sure ballot boxes aren't whisked away.

Most monitoring groups require observers stay in groups of two. Generally, observers don't speak or ask questions unless they're senior monitors investigating an incident. Observers take meticulous notes — often a detailed form for short-term observers — and report to their team leader, who supervises groups of five to 20 people. The findings are usually tallied in a brief report shortly after the vote and a more detailed one afterward.

Long-term observers like Michael MacKay of Ottawa are in Ukraine for up to 10 weeks. They're monitoring campaigns and media coverage and tracking the electoral commission's logistics down to individual polling stations. Generally, they issue weekly reports and welcome the short-term observers.

"There's an external pressure that was not present last two terms," says MacKay, who also monitored Ukraine's vote in 2010 and 2004, when Canada first sent a large delegation. "The stakes are higher than they've ever been."

Governments who send delegates usually assign independent organizations to recruit and select observers. OSCE guidelines suggest candidates with prior monitoring experience and language skills. Most observers get their foot in the door by applying for a country they've studied or lived in, according to Canada's main civilian-reserve group, Canadem.

Many of the 1,500 Canadians who applied to observe Ukraine's election are among the 1.2 million Canadians with Ukrainian roots. There's also a contingent of academics who observe multiple elections. MacKay worked with people who had served in Kosovo, Sri Lanka and Haiti.

Transportation, insurance, meals and accommodation are covered by the governments — our government estimates the 500-strong delegation will cost $10 million.

But for the observers it's a big time commitment for a vote with no guaranteed outcome, as Metro's Saskatchewan columnist Christina Cherneskey knows well.

"To call the 2012 election democratic is a sham. I left without even knowing who won," Cherneskey recalls.

While voting went smoothly, she had to stay up all night to make sure nobody tampered with the ballot boxes. When someone finally came in the morning, they drove the ballots to the district office, where things seemed chaotic. Inside, it was an "exhausting, intense fiasco" where every scribble and acronym was used as an excuse to toss out votes.

"I left feeling empty," she said.

World's largest gold producer hit with suit

Barrick Gold Corp.
Class-action lawsuit launched after mine project in South America misses construction deadline

Several Canadian law firms are pursuing a class action against Barrick Gold Corp. and some of its current and former senior officers, alleging they misrepresented how much risk the company faced when it undertook construction of the multi-billion-dollar Pascua-Lama mine project in South America.

The project involves one of the world's largest deposits of gold, estimated at nearly 18 million ounces, but the company missed its original target of starting production in early 2013 due to opposition from local groups and Chilean authorities.

The suit, filed Wednesday with the Ontario Superior Court of Justice, alleges Barrick described Pascua-Lama as a feasible and highly economic project due to the low cost to construct the mine and to produce gold and silver from it, adding that the company knew or should have known that it would have to overcome significant obstacles.

"The mine is located underneath glaciers in the Andes mountains, and the environment is subject to extreme temperature and weather changes. Barrick is a sophisticated mining company that has constructed and operated mines all over the world. The challenges in developing Pascua-Lama were or should have been readily apparent to Barrick," the claim alleges.

"There was also considerable opposition to the Pascua-Lama project from local communities that depended on the water supply the glaciers provided. These communities, along with various environmental groups, were concerned about adverse impacts of mining on the glaciers and contamination of the water supply."

Norway buys island for the 'common good'

Norway says it will buy a vast portion of private land on its Arctic island of Svalbard a week after a Chinese property tycoon said he wanted the land to build a resort for wealthy travellers.

Trade Minister Monica Maerland said Thursday the "common good" on the island is best served if the 216 square kilometres is in public hands.

Last week, developer Huang Nubo had talked up the possibility of persuading hardy Chinese and Russian tourists to visit the icy island famous for its snow-covered mountains, fjords and glaciers.

Huang's purchase would have given him a foothold along a potential Arctic shipping route that could cut weeks off the current trade route from the Far East to European and North American markets.

HASHTAG DICTIONARY SELFIE

1 Happy birthday, Mr. Rubik('s Cube): The addictive Candy Crush is all the rage nowadays, but back in the day it was the offline game Rubik's Cube. The Cube turned 40 this week and its birthday trended on Twitter. Google even honoured it with a supercool 3D interactive doodle. I never could solve the darn thing, but man it was a badge of honour to carry it around at school — almost completed.

Further proof (like we needed it) that social media is where it's at: among the new words added to Merriam-Webster's 2014 collegiate dictionary are "hashtag," "selfie," "tweep" and "crowdfunding." Yep, it's cool to read the dictionary again, kids. Just make sure to live-tweet it as you study it — and watch your auto-correct.

Mutant time travel a real trip

Reel Guys

RICHARD CROUSE AND MARK BRESLIN

Hugh Jackman stars in X-Men: Days of Future Past. CONTRIBUTED

Synopsis

Based on a 1981 two-issue special of the X-Men comic series, the new film begins in a post-apocalyptic future. Menacing robot warriors called Sentinels have created chaos for the mutant race, bringing them to the edge of extinction. To combat the threat, long-time enemies Professor X (Patrick Stewart) and Magneto (Ian McKellen) team up with Storm (Halle Berry), Blink (Fan Bingbing), Bishop (Omar Sy) and use Kitty Pryde's (Ellen Page) teleportation ability to send Wolverine (Hugh Jackman) back in time to change history and prevent the creation of the murderous automations.

X-Men. The latest instalment lives up to the franchise's reputation for smart, fun summer fare

Richard: Mark, Days of Future Past offers up two for the price of one. Merging the young versions of Magneto and Professor X with their older counterparts is a cool idea, and certainly gives the movie a boost in the marquee department, but I felt the old timers were left with their own heightened sense of drama and not much else. It seems a shame to have Mc-

Kellen and Stewart, the Martin and Lewis of mutants, on screen together and not give them much to do. What did you think?

Mark: This instalment really belongs to McAvoy, Jackman, Jennifer Lawrence and Michael Fassbender. I didn't care for the "future" plot with the foggy mutants, but I thought the movie snapped to attention when it flashed back to 1973. The sense of time and place seemed very authentic; in one scene Lawrence is dressed exactly like Carly Simon on the cover of her third album. I half expected her to launch into a rendition of You're So Vain at Fassbender. There's some interesting historical revisionism revolving around JFK and Nixon that even conspiracy theorists would find preposterous — more X-Files than X-Men — but I appreciated the creative effort.

RC: It's a movie about time travel, mutants and serious actors like Michael Fassbender saying lines like, "We received a message from the future," so, of course, it's a little preposterous, but wrapped up in the time-bending plot are some interesting ideas about racism, tolerance, war and rebellion. Not usually the stuff of summer blockbusters, but the X-Men franchise has always been a bit brainier than most. At times it's a bit too ponderous, but I'll take that over the flash-and-trash of most CGI epics.

MB: Me too. I like the franchise for its superior acting, plotting, and its whiff of Ayn Rand objectivism. But it's got a sense of humour, too, which is rarely found in these epics. There's a fantastic scene in this movie where Evan Peters as the young Quicksilver, who can move faster than human time, rearranges an entire tableau of bad guys so they wind up hurting themselves instead of our heroes. But he does it with such juvenile glee that it captures the joy of being a powerful mutant and an adolescent prankster. And casting height-challenged Peter Dinklage to play a scientist out to destroy the "outsiders" is brilliantly ironic.

RC: The actors are all good, but I would argue that the real stars of the film are the ideas. Magneto, Professor and Wolverine are all complex, cool characters that bring the film's themes to life; all the rest is set dressing, except for the Quicksilver scene you mentioned. That was like The Matrix without Keanu's hang-dog expression.

MB: Oh, and just a warning, Richard. When I googled the film there was a link to a movie called XXX Men. Do NOT click on this link!

Filmmaker sheds light on Night Moves

Behind the greens.
Kelly Reichardt

NED

Metro World News in Hollywood

Filmmaker Kelly Reichardt's Night Moves offers an intimate look into the lives of three radical environmentalists (played by Jesse Eisenberg, Dakota Fanning and Peter Sarsgaard) looking to blow up a hydroelectric dam as a form of protest. And it's quite a detailed look — though she stops short of actually explaining how to build a bomb.

Environmental issues seem to be popping up in films more and more, as the issue is clearly not going away.
But it's been part of the conversation for a really long time. I can't remember when Earth First started, but people have been trying to lay their bodies down in front of bulldozers that are going to knock down trees for quite a while now, you know? But nevertheless, we were just really trying to make something that was today and just create a world, basically.

Night Moves stars Dakota Fanning, Jesse Eisenberg and Peter Sarsgaard. CONTRIBUTED

Where did this idea come from?
I don't know, it's been in the air with us for a while. My producer, Neil Kopp, was born and raised in Oregon, and Neil had grown up with a kid who had done something pretty radical that put him in jail for a while. If you're in the Northwest, it's around you. It's easy to wonder where the waterways came from, it's easy to look at the clear-cuts. People talk about the salmon a lot, so it's all sort of in the air. But then also I had just re-read Crime and Punishment and we were drawn to this type of process film, like Riffifi, where you take time out in the middle of a film to really show how something's done. That was really attractive to me, the small steps to get to something as opposed to the big moment at the end of it. Basically how to take this little world that we hadn't seen represented in film so much and put it into the framework of a more traditional genre, and what would that look like?

Of course, when you're showing how people construct a bomb, you don't want to be too detailed.
Oh, you can go on the Internet and figure out how to build a bomb really quickly if you want, you know? For better or worse. I don't think ours acts as a real how-to guide in any way.

Right, you aren't naming types of charges or fuses, at least.
No, but you can Google Timothy McVeigh and find out everything you ever wanted to know, sadly, about building a bomb. You might not even want to put that in your article. My father was on the bomb squad for 20 years in Miami when I grew up, and I can remember being a teenager and some of my sister's friends stealing some of my dad's bomb-building books. The information's out there.

Falling in love with The Rock

The Grand Seduction.

Brendan Gleeson and Taylor Kitsch lived the laid-back life while filming movie

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

The Grand Seduction premiered at the Toronto International Film Festival last September, but the movie's star was more concerned about an audience a little east of there.

"I felt they would let us know if they didn't like it," says Brendan Gleeson.

The film is set in a small Newfoundland harbour named Tickle Head where the town fathers have a bid on a petrochemical byproduct repurposing plant that makes ... well, it doesn't matter, as they say in the movie, it makes jobs.

One key element that's missing, however, is a local doctor.

When Paul Lewis (Taylor Kitsch), a city slicker plastic surgeon, lands in the harbour for a month-long residency, the entire place (population: 121) bands together to convince him

Brendan Gleeson and Taylor Kitsch soaked up the laid back life while they were filming The Grand Seduction, which opens next Friday. CONTRIBUTED to stay — by any means necessary. "I really wanted to be at the premier in St. John's," said Gleeson, who is best known as Alastor 'Mad-Eye' Moody in the Harry Potter series, "because to me, if the movie worked there, I could let it go. That's all I cared about, really. It needed to have the imprimatur of the Newfoundlanders on it for me.

Their reaction was quiet until they felt the reassurance that it was OK, that they could trust it a little bit more."

The production spent seven weeks shooting on The Rock.

"The land and the sea in Newfoundland has a way of worming itself into your heart where you don't feel quite complete without it," said Gleeson.

Quoted

"If the opportunity presents itself and it's right, I'm in."

Taylor Kitsch, Actor

The B.C. born Kitsch on why he jumps at an opportunity to work in Canada when it arises.

Co-star Kitsch concurs. "It's a very simple (way of life)," he says, "and obviously the pace is a lot slower, but once you get into that, you don't want to leave it. They are very in the moment when you're talking to them. You feel like they are incredibly genuine and grounded and there's no ulterior motive," he said. "Maybe I'm a bit jaded because of the business, but it is refreshing. It is kind of what it means to be a Canadian."

Kitsch spent his off hours training for Lone Survivor, a Mark Wahlberg war film he shot immediately after wrapping on The Grand Seduction but he took some time to enjoy a great Newfoundland pastime — fishing. "My best friend is an avid fisherman," he says, "so he'd be figuring out what was going on with the moon and what the best tide is and when we should go and would get genuinely upset if we weren't there at exactly 6:12 a.m. dropping lures into the water."

The Kelowna, B.C.-born Kitsch is an in-demand actor these days and can currently be seen in the HBO movie The Normal Heart, but says he'd love to do more work in Canada. "I absolutely loved being in Canada," he says, "working on home soil with a bunch of Canadians. "If the opportunity presents itself and it's right, I'm in."

Murder most foul: A Shakey-Quentin smackdown

This year, lovers of literature are celebrating the 450th anniversary of the birth of William Shakespeare. The Bard of Avon is known in part for his dramatic, and at times disturbing, portrayals of death, but how does the violence of his oeuvre stack up against that of the master of big-screen mayhem, Quentin Tarantino?

Angelina Jolie gets her evil on as the titular character in Disney's Maleficent.

Onscreen anti-hero, real-life heroine

Maleficent. Angelina Jolie speaks out about the kidnapping of the Nigerian schoolgirls, refugees in Syria, and her double mastectomy Angelina Jolie may be Hollywood royalty, but she's no princess, and has never been a fan of the Disney variety.

"I found them quite dull," the actress says.

Evil Maleficent, whom Jolie portrays in Disney's new live-action spin on its animated classic Sleeping Beauty, conversely "seemed to be having a great time," Jolie said.

"(Maleficent) is kind of an anti-hero for the odd man out," Jolie continued. "And, when she feels abused, or when somebody hurts her, she then says, 'Oh, all right. You're going to mess with me? Watch me.'"

In a recent interview to promote Maleficent, which opens May 30, the conversation veered to the celebrities at the Cannes film festival campaigning for the return of the Nigerian schoolgirls kidnapped by Islamic extremist group Boko Haram.

"We need to go after (Boko Haram), arrest them, and they need to face justice," said Jolie, who is known for her worldwide humanitarian efforts.

She added, however, that the media shouldn't be myopic, but instead continue to report on the array of world horrors, including the continuing plight of millions of refugees suffering in Syria.

Last week marked the one-year anniversary of Jolie's disclosure that she was having a double mastectomy because she carries a genetic mutation that greatly increases her risk of potentially fatal breast cancer. "(I'm) very happy that other women now know that they have that choice," she commented.

Jolie's next film is her big-budget directorial debut, Unbroken. She previously directed the modest 2011 Bosnian war drama In the Land of Blood and Honey and the 2007 documentary A Place in Time, which chronicled 49 simultaneous moments around the world.

Arriving this Christmas, Unbroken chronicles the life of Louis Zamperini, an Olympic runner who was taken prisoner by Japanese forces during World War II.

"It looks beautiful," Jolie said. "It's such a ... it's big," she added, with an exasperated laugh.

"So, we're just trying to kind of wrestle it in to the best version of itself."

Troubled mayor? Sounds familiar...

Wink wink. Creators of Canadian sitcom Spun Out can't a-Ford to tell us the inspiration for a politician character in the season finale

Watch it

Find out about Mayor "Johnson's" troubles on the season finale of Spun Out, airing tonight at 8 p.m. ET on CTV

You'd think plopping a character based on Toronto Mayor Rob Ford into a sitcom would be a no-brainer. The embattled mayor, currently in rehab, has been the subject of late-night barbs for well over a year. He even flew to Los Angeles in March to be a guest of Jimmy Kimmel Live, where the host mocked him for dressing "like a magician." Just a week or so ago, David Letterman ran a "Top 10 reasons Rob Ford is taking a leave of absence." No. 10: "His drinking is beginning to interfere with his crack smoking."

On Friday, a rather tubby, out-of-control mayor seeks help on the season finale of the new Canadian comedy Spun Out. "Troubled Mayor Seeks Image Makeover," reads the headline on the release promoting the episode. The character is described as, "Lewd. Obnoxious. Drunken. The city's most controversial mayor."

Just don't confuse him with anyone who might actually be the current mayor of Toronto, pleads Spun Out co-creator Jeff Biederman.

Spun Out stars Dave Foley as the head of a public relations firm staffed with people "who can spin anybody's problems but their own." Celebrities sometimes come seeking help. An earlier episode featured a bratty pop star who might have reminded some viewers of Justin Bieber.

Biederman and fellow executive producer and showrunner Brent Piaskoski certainly were aware of Rob Ford when the idea of having an out-of-control mayor seek help from their fictional public relations firm was first kicked around the writers' room.

But the spin they're putting on this Spun Out episode is that any resemblance to T.O.'s troubled top official is purely a coincidence.

"We went with 'mayor' not because of the obvious comparisons to our city's mayor," says Biederman.

"It was mostly because if we go with 'premier' and we do sales internationally, people might not know who that is."

Lawyers generally read scripts to check for potentially litigious issues before an episode goes to camera. The legal team at Spun Out did caution the producers to back off some Ford associations. Suggestions to call the character "Dodge" or other car names were quickly dismissed. (He's called "Johnson" in the episode.)

Biederman says Ford's real-life antics had not hit their "fever pitch" back when the episode was written. Spun Out is shot before a live, studio audience, with this episode going before the cameras way back last summer. Even then, Biederman admits, the crowd in the bleachers could tell where the writers were going with this.

3 songs for the weekend

A melancholy acoustic folkster, and two tracks all about girls, girls, girls

Sound Check

ALAN CROSS

Sloppy Love/ Nathan K.

A beautifully sad song about a lost love from a self-described anti-freak folkist from Michigan. The video features Nathan lip-syncing the song while trying to hold a sheep. No, I don't know why. From his upcoming album, Methodist Girls, due July 8.

Go to Go/ ADAM

The song by this five-piece all-female EDM group from the Netherlands is fine. But what is really grabbing attention is the video that features all five (fully-clothed) members' attempt to sing the song while a vibrator — unseen — enters the situation. Sort of NSFW, yet not.

Girls/Sizzy Rocket

A brilliant cover of the Beastie Boys classic, re-engineered to be non-sexist and pro-female. Well done.

See that symbol? It means you can scan this image with your Metro News app to listen to Alan's recommended songs this week.

Video game review

Name. Mario Kart 8

For. Nintendo Wii U

Rated. Everyone

• • • • •

With karts that can stick to the ground, Nintendo is free to take their courses vertical into gravity-defying swells and loops that — thanks to enriched, dazzling graphics — you feel in the pit of your stomach. The core racing remains unchanged, but with a better sense of visual motion. It's the music though, with unfortunate jazz wanderings, that feels one-dimensional. Yes, there are new characters and new boomerang and flower weapons, but it's the online racing and video sharing that add new twists to this family favourite.

Mike Myers says Kanye 'spoke a truth' during Katrina relief telecast

It only took nine years, but Mike Myers is finally chiming in on his infamous befuddlement standing next to Kanye West after the rapper let loose with, "George Bush doesn't care about black people," during a televised Hurricane Katrina relief benefit. "For me it isn't about the look of embarrassment on my face, it is truly about the injustice that was happening in New Orleans," Myers tells GQ magazine. "I'm the guy next to the guy who spoke a truth. I assume that George Bush does care about black people — I mean, I don't know him, I'm going to make that assumption — but I can definitively say that it appeared to me watching television that had that been white people, the government would have been there faster."

Guns N' Roses set to split

It looks like it's the end of the road for Guns N' Roses, as the rock band is set to split following its current Las Vegas residency so that Axl Rose — the only remaining original member of the band — can retire. "Axl has made enough money and wants to stop touring.

He is considering retiring," a source tells Radar Online. "Band members have been told their calendars are free following Vegas. Axl is considering retiring and it's done. Band members and support staff were surprised when told the news and are actively looking for work."

Miley thinks JLaw needs to get it together

CHRISTINA PACIOLLA

Jennifer Lawrence stopped by Late Night with Seth Myers to promote her new film X-Men: Days of Future Past, and told Myers and the audience an embarrassing story. Not our JLaw!

In the past, Lawrence says, she hasn't gone to any awards show after-parties, but this year, she brought her best friend to the Oscars and the duo partied down. In fact, JLaw partied so hard that she threw up all over the front porch at Madonna's "big fancy party" post-Oscars.

"I've never gone out after Golden Globes or Oscars or anything. I'm just so sick of people by that point. I'm like, 'Ugh, God!' But this time I was like, 'I'm going out.' And I puked all over," she reveals. "I was in such bad condition, and I look behind me while I'm puking and Miley Cyrus is there like, 'Get it together.'"

When Miley Cyrus (she of tongue-wagging, molly-bragging, weed-cake-eating fame) looks at you like that, that's when you know you've got a problem.

Prude or prejudice? Barbra turned off by art book of 'beautiful' gay sex pictures

According to The Normal Heart playwright Larry Kramer, longtime gay icon Barbra Streisand isn't actually so down with the gays. Kramer worked closely with Streisand after she bought the rights to the play, about the early days of the AIDS crisis. "I bought her a book of very beautiful art pictures of two men making love, and she found it very distasteful," Kramer tells the New York Times. He also took a dig at Streisand by praising director Ryan Murphy, who eventually adapted the play into a film after funding it with his own money, which Kramer says "shows how much he wanted to do this, and how tacky it sort of is that Barbra never would think of something like that." Streisand, for her part, insists her reaction to

I've given up waiting for spring, not to mention summer. I keep looking at the calendar and then out the window, and nothing seems to be jiving.

Though it may be rainy and cold in most parts of our "wonderful" country, I'm determined to embrace reality and sit out on my deck even if it is with an umbrella in hand.

The liquid philosophy that certain wines are tied to a specific season has always rubbed me the wrong way. While a big-boned red may not be the ideal tippie after mowing the lawn in early August; that doesn't mean you couldn't enjoy a glass with a barbecued steak come dinnertime.

Of course, some wineries target the seasons. E & J Gallo's Barefoot Refresh Summer Red ($11.95 - $15.99) has one in its name. A blend of pinot noir rosé and moscato, it's a glass full of lightly sweet, freshly crushed red berries that go as well with warmer weather as it would with Christmas dinner.

Serving tip: Try over ice.

1. Heat 3 tbsp of the neutral oil in a fry pan and fry the walnuts over a medium heat until lightly browned — about 2-3 minutes. Lift out of the oil with a slotted spoon and drain on a paper towel. Reserve the oil to dress the salad. Alternatively, roast them dry on an oven tray at 180 C for 12-15 minutes.

2. Halve and core the pears and slice each half into 6-8 wedges. Place in a mixing bowl and toss gently with the lemon juice.

3. Heat the remaining 1 tbsp

Ingredients

- 4 tbsp neutral oil (e.g. grapeseed)
- 1 cup fresh walnut pieces
- 2 just ripe pears
- juice of 1/2 lemon
- 250 g haloumi, thinly sliced
- 6 handfuls (150 g) fresh watercress sprigs or baby spinach leaves

Pears in Verjuice: A unique take on dessert

1. Peel pears, leaving whole with their stalks intact. Take a fine slice off the bottom of each pear to enable them to stand for serving. Put to one side.

2. Place Verjuice (see right), honey and cinnamon stick into a pot and bring to a simmer, stirring once or twice. Add the pears and poach for 30 minutes, turning occasionally.

3. Remove the pears from the pot and reduce the sauce by two thirds. Serve the pears drizzled with sauce. They will keep for over a week in the fridge.

NBA owner

Cuban apologizes for racism remark

Dallas Mavericks owner Mark Cuban apologized Thursday to Trayvon Martin's family over his choice of words in an interview in which he addressed bigotry and prejudice.

"We're all prejudiced in one way or the other," Cuban said in the Inc. interview. "If I see a black kid in a hoodie and it's late at night, I'm walking to the other side of the street. And if on that side of the street, there's a guy that has tattoos all over his face — white guy, bald head, tattoos everywhere — I'm walking back to the other side of the street."

"In hindsight I should have used different examples," Cuban wrote Thursday. "I didn't consider the Trayvon Martin family, and I apologize to them for that." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Canada Finnished in quarter-finals

When Team Canada pushed, Pekka Rinne shoved back. The result was Finland moving on and Canada going home.

Rinne made 36 saves as Canada dropped a 3-2 decision Thursday at the world hockey championship at Chizhovka Arena. It was the fifth straight year that Canada has been eliminated in the quarter-finals.

"We had a couple breakdowns," said Canadian captain Kevin Bieksa. "We knew going into this game that the Finns were a team that would sit back and capitalize on our mistakes, and they made us pay tonight."

League's-best Buehrle helps Jays sweep Sox

MLB. Pitcher maintains hot streak as Toronto slugers hit 67-homer mark versus Boston

Mark Buehrle got his major league-leading eighth win with a big boost from Toronto's powerful lineup.

Neither was surprising. "Look what he's done all year," Blue Jays manager John Gibbons said after a 7-2 win over the Boston Red Sox on Thursday. "Who's pitched better in baseball?"

Buehrle (8-1) has eight wins through May for the first time since 2002 and an ERA of 2.16. He gave up two runs in the first two innings, but by then Toronto had seven, starting with homers on consecutive pitches by Melky Cabrera and Jose Bautista in the first inning.

That gave the Blue Jays a major league-high 67 homers and gave Buehrle a big cushion.

The 15-year veteran lefty blanked the Red Sox for his final five innings and allowed seven hits and no walks while striking out five in seven innings.

Dustin McGowan pitched two shutout innings as the Blue Jays took a half-game lead over the New York Yankees in the AL East.

"It's nice, obviously" to lead the majors in wins, "but I've always said you can go out your next eight starts and (stink) and be under .500," Buehrle said. "I try to throw it out the window and get ready for my next start."

AL East beware

"He just missed some spots and they're hot right now. Missed spots against these guys, they're going to whack it."

Boston's A.J. Pierzynski

lost its seventh straight.

"We're in a stretch of games here where we're giving up too many runs early and we're scuffling to score runs," Boston manager John Farrell said. "That's a dangerous combination."

Red Sox ace Jon Lester (4-6) had his worst outing of the season, allowing seven runs and seven hits through 1 1/3 innings. Then he settled down and retired 12 straight batters before giving up a single to Kevin Pillar with one out in the seventh. But Pillar was caught stealing.

Lester left with one out in the seventh after allowing 10 hits and striking out just three. He had averaged an AL-best 10.83 strikeouts per nine innings.

"The list goes on and on of things that I just flat out didn't do," Lester said. "I just wasn't able to do it with anything. Pick a pitch, I wasn't able to do it."

Buehrle retired 11 of his last 12 batters. He began the day tied with Zack Greinke, Rick Porcello and Adam Wainwright with seven wins each.

Blackhawks regroup after L.A. beatdown

Although Chicago and Los Angeles have won the last two Stanley Cup titles, Matt Greene and his fellow Kings realize the Blackhawks have been superior whenever the two championship teams were on the ice together recently.

Chicago's recent mastery of the Kings completely came apart in one crazy period, and the Blackhawks are headed to the West Coast to figure out how to get it back.

When the teams return Saturday night for Game 3 of the Western Conference finals, the Kings hope to build on their five-goal third period in a 6-2 victory on Wednesday night, which evened the series in dramatic fashion.

Until Game 2, Chicago had beaten the Kings six straight times and in nine of the clubs' last 10 meetings dating back to last season's conference finals. The Blackhawks had been faster and more offensively creative than the Kings, but it all went away in a barrage of goals that set a distinctly different tone for Game 3.

"It's been a series that's gone in their favour for the last couple of years now," Greene said Thursday at the Kings' training complex. "We've got to do our best to change that."

Horoscopes

♈ Aries

March 21 - April 20

Money issues have taken centre stage for some time but now the Sun has changed signs you should be a bit more relaxed about what you own and what you earn. If your social life has suffered make up for it today.

♉ Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Come down to earth and deal with matters of a practical nature. Above all, you must be sensible with money, especially if you are the kind of Taurus who takes an "easy come, easy go" attitude to cash.

♊ Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Your head and your heart are working in harmony now, so anything you begin over the next few days will have the mark of success on it. Follow your instincts and don't let the doubters talk you into changing your plans.

♋ Cancer

June 22 - July 23

To make sense of what occurred in recent weeks you need to stand back and see life from a wider perspective. What is it all for? Where is it all taking you? These are the sort of questions you need to ask.

♌ Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

It may seem as if you have reached your limits or hit some kind of wall but don't give up. There are plenty of people out there who will happily help you out but what you need to realize is they can't read your mind. If you need help — ask!

♍ Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

Over the next few days you will get the chance to put big ideas to the test. One of those ideas could turn your life around and send you off in a direction you never even considered before. Don't be afraid to take risks.

♎ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

One of the best times of the year for you is now under way, so get rid of any negative attitudes you may have and start looking forward to all the good things that will be coming your way. Be positive in thought, word and deed.

♏ Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

The more you try to give up certain things you know are not good for you the more you end up indulging in them. Maybe that's the only way. Maybe you need to wallow in what you desire until you desire it no more.

♐ Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Now that the Sun has moved into the partnership area of your chart you will have to take what other people think and see and need into account your way. Together you can do great things but your aims must be compatible.

♑ Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

Over the next few days you will have to decide what is worth carrying on with and what needs to be junked. Don't let sentiment play a part in your decision: put your needs first.

♒ Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Dark days are behind you and everything light. Well, maybe it's not that good — yet. But it's now within your power to change your life in major ways. Forget about yesterday, today is the only day that matters.

♓ Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Social activities are important, of course, but your home life is what you should be focusing on now. If there are problems in the domestic sphere it's unlikely you will be happy in other areas, so look for solutions — you'll find them. SALLY BROMPTON
